SAC Horses around with the Stables

By Deborah Spencer

In a surprise move at Wednesday's SAC meeting on the Scarborough Campus, SAC Financial Commissioner Greg Tugg proposed a motion to close the SAC Riding Stables.

This motion was in direct contradiction to an earlier SAC Executive Meeting proposal to give the Scarborough Riding Stables a grace period of four months. The four months were to have been used by the Stables to achieve their proposed budget.

The lengthy debate which followed Tugg's motion resulted in its defeat by a margin of 15 to 19.

It was then proposed that SAC should sell the Riding Stables after the four month grace period, regardless of its outcome. This motion passed by one vote.

Scarborough students can be proud of their representation at Wednesday's meeting. Scarborough SAC Representatives Larry Leger, Moses Wuggenig, Brad Christakos, and SCSC President Rosanna Barbuto all spoke highly in favour of the Riding Stables and they refused to be intimidated by the downtown SAC members, some of whom were openly reading newspapers.

Moses Wuggenig defiantly opposed Greg Tugg by saying, "I find it disconcerting to see so early in the year, the Finance Commissioner chomping at the bit to axe services." Wuggenig expanded stating that "SAC is a services organization not Inco."

In response to Tugg's statement that the money saved by SAC could be better spent on different Scarborough services, Larry Leger replied, "tempt us with more bullshit!"

SCSC President Rosanna Barbuto's comment, "I think that the Stables can be saved whether SAC wants them or not!" was met with a loud round of applause.

The Riding Stables now find themselves between a rock and a hard place. Even if they prove to be financially responsible at the end of four months, SAC is still threatening to sell them. SAC Vice President Linda Quirk asked the question which most needs to be answered. "Is this service a priority over other services?"

Youth Year

What it means to You

By Valerie Alexander

Scarborough International Youth Year Task Force is looking for two volunteers to represent Scarborough Campus for the up-coming International Youth Year.

International Youth Year, designated by the United Nations General Assembly for the year 1985, has incorporated three main themes into its overall objectives-Participation, Development and Peace. The primary proclamation is to increase concern over the situation of youths,ages 15-24, and the contribution the younger generation can make in today's world.

The United Nations General Assembly is attempting to meet the needs of the majority of the future population by taking into consideration the global situation of youths and the growing youth population. Key words such as"unemployment ," "underdevelopment ," and "subsistence" are among many of the major concerns of young people today.

Current United nations projections indicated the global youth population will reach one billion by 1991. The majority of young people live in developing regions such as Africa and Latin America. By the beginning of the next century 83.5 percent of all youth will live in developing regions. Such striking statistics indicate the urgent need to help the youth population to develop their potential. Local, regional and national task forces are set up to deal effectively with precisely such concerns.

The objectives of Scarborough International Youth Year Task Force are to increase awareness of youth issues in the community.

There are five main objectives, the first is to increase general awareness of youth needs and aspirations in Scarborough among decision makers and the public. A second goal is to promote policies and programs relating to youth as an integral part of socilal and economic development. Thirdly, the task force hopes to enhance the active participation of youth in society with the promotion and development of peace. Fourthly, it is hoped mutual respect will be promoted among younger people and lastly, the task force hopes its work will encourage cooperation at all levels dealing with youth issues.

The Scarborough International Youth Year Task Force consists of an Advisory Council and a Youth Council.

The Advisory Council consists of 33 Scarborough adult residents representing many community organizations. The Boy Scouts organization, the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches as well as SCSC are part of the council. The Youth Council consists of 2oo young Scarborough Residents. Of this number, 120 positions are open to the public on a volunteer basis. Our own Student Council President, Rosanna Barbuto has been appointed by Scarborough Campus Principal G.R. Williams to sit on an advisory council. The task of the Youth Council is to develop a nd co-ordinate programming for the up-coming year. Members of the council will chair each of the committees. Also, the design and implementation of all programs are left entirely to the people they are intended to help-youths.

Through a grant, Harold Adams, chairman of the Scarborough International Youth Year Task Force, hired nine students to survey, develop and submit a report of youth issues in this community.

Presently, 36 issues have been recommended as major youth concerns to be probed.

Adams said the youth task force is to encourage youths to get involved and to give them "a voice" and get concrete action moving.

Depending on the success of the task force, youth issues may be extended to 1995. In this way, momentum will not be lost as the "decade of the youth" will.

EDITORIAL

The End of the Stables

Last Wednesday in our Council Chambers, SAC decided in surprising fashion, that funding for the Riding Stables on Scarborough Campus would be stopped.

Initially, one may feel contempt for SAC's move. However, let's analyze the situation: This is one of the first concrete moves that SAC has made in an effort to be "financially responsible." The Riding Stables are losing quite a bit of money at this moment, and SAC obviously feels that, since the Stables are financed by all U of T students, that they are not one of the more valued services by the students. Being located on the Scarborough Campus, the Stables are out on the fringes and distant from the U of T community.

As for the Stables themselves, they're a good idea and a nice luxury that we have on our campus.
The Administration obviously would like them to continue on as they definitely make the campus more attractive.

The people in charge of the Stables however, have stated that they have repeatedly tried to introduce new fund-raising activities to SAC that would make the Stables a profit-making operation.
Has SAC listened to these people? Are their ideas feasable? If not, then yes, the Stables may have to be closed. However, if there is a chance that these ideas could work (and we should always be looking for opportunities), then give the Stables a time period in which to make things work. And at the end of the period, if progress has not been made, then close them through the withdrawal of funding.

Let's hope that if SAC is going to start drawing the line between what's necessary and what's not, that they also extend this to Downtown and Erindale campuses.

All students pay SAC fees. There are many areas downtown that are given money, and of which few Suburban Campus students are aware of or care about.

We applaud SAC for taking a stand on the issue, but we hope it was with good intention and that all other alternatives were looked into first.

ENTERTAINMENT

The Woman in Red an uplifting experience

By Andrew Pyle

Just as the effects of the tremendous box-office smash, "Ghostbusters", begin to fade, another display of comic genius is drawing lovers of laughter to the screens for a second helping. This comedy is Gene Wilder's latest, and probably greatest work (sans Richard Pryor), "The Woman in Red."

"The Woman in Red"is an adaptation of an earlier French screenplay. Though similar in plot and design, Wilder adds his usual, magical sense of humour -- the likes of which led to the success of "Stir Crazy" and "Silver Streak."

Wilder, who also wrote and directed the movie, plays an excessively average, married office worker who falls madly in love with a beautiful, yet elusive model played by Kelly LeBrock.

Wilder's attempts at seduction are constantly frustrated as his every approach or proposition tends to get redirected, via the telephone, to a much less desirable office secretary played by Gilda Radner.

Wilder's success in directing the film comes from the fact that he does not let himself become the main attraction long enough for us to get bored with him. Instead we are treated to a collection of characters, each of which is involved in his or her own subplot.

The reason why this movie works is that, instead of adding the confusion which one might expect from all these storylines, we observe true simplicity as all characters share the same theme of a desire for excitement and change of pace.

"The Woman in Red" is not only a further example of Wilder's ability to make us laugh, but a display of the clean to the point humour that most domestic ventures seem to lack. It is definitely a must-see movie.

Beer, Beer, Beer,...

The first Breweries Week in Scarborough College history came to a close last Thursday night in the pub.

Judging from the student response to the events which accompanied this week, it was a huge success. Nowhere was this more evident than in the attendance, or lack thereof of student's in classes this week. Many of those who did skip class ended up in The Pub using the lame excuse that they were up there checking out the renovations when, in fact, they were putting away cases of Molson's finest brews. Frosh were seen stumbling in a drunken stupor as they tried to compete with the more experienced fourth year Poli-Sci, Geography, and Commerce drinkers.

Monday's attraction (and no, it wasn't the new stucco walls) was the $1.05 Come Alive, special drink/special price. And tell me Anne, how many of those did we put away?? Hmm?!!

On Tuesday and Thursday nights we were entertained by The Wild Ones, and Brian Hibbert, respectively, always favourites at Scarborough. They got live entertainment off to great start this year.

Wednesday night's featured extravaganza saw us graced with the presence of CSCR's (Scarborough College Radio) own DJ's, Calvin Reynolds and Bruce Sneddon. Music was good, but a rather lethargic and shy crowd was in attendance, as no one danced.(Although they just may have been too wasted to notice or care).

And Friday! Friday? Oh yeah, the place was closed. But, I'm sure we all found somewhere to go and party.

Hey gang what can I say?! Breweries Week was a big hit. Congratulations all round to those who contributed to it's happening and success. I now look forward to even bigger and better things during Orientation Week.

See you in the pub!!

Football prospects good for this year

By Paul Kossta

The Scarborough Campus inter-faculty football team is confident that this is the year they will show the boys downtown how this game is played.

Coming off a heartbreaking rebuilding year, co-captain Mike Ridley and lineman Greg Ward feel the team is a definite playoff contender.

Coaches Chris "Tree" and Russ Henderson, along with about half of last year's team of thirty are back this year. This should provide a good core of seasoned veterans to help out this year's talented rookies.

Veterans Ridley, Mason, O'Sullivan and Morishita are ready to provide the solid kind of backfield defense needed to stop the opposing teams cold. In fact, it looks as though defense may be Scarborough's strong suit. Linemen Foti, Mackie and Ward are all proven factors in this defensive strength.

Offensively, most players are confident that quarterback Omar Nassif can do the job again this year. Since Scarborough's offense is primarily pass-oriented, Nassif will be relying heavily on the talents of wide receiver Chuck Doran. With Scott Locus in the backfield, the running game is not too shaky, though without a good ground game the offense may run into some serious difficulties.

Judging from their impressive performances last year, the opposing teams to look out for are Phys. Ed. and St. Mike's. Scarborough is going to have to work hard against these teams to win a chance at a playoff spot. But, with the enthusiasm and talent we've got this year, indications are that Scarborough is in for a fine year.

No Money, No School

OTTAWA(CUP) — Some Canadian students will not have to worry about frantic registration, overcrowded classrooms and long lineups for textbooks this fall.

They won't have the money to return to school.

They are some of the estimated half a million young people who were unemployed this summer. They are the people behind the statistics, the job-seekers who ended up empty-handed.

According to Statistics Canada, the summer employment rate for those between the ages of 15 and 24 hovered around 17 per cent. Many of those were students. Some early on decided they would not go back, others vowed to return and hoped their prospects would lighten.

Ian Weniger, a 20-year-old B.C. resident now living in Ottawa, is one of these students. Studying second year economics at the University of B.C., he thought he would find a job. But a summer of searching turned up nothing.

Weniger does not need to read the latest unemployment figures to understand the problem. He knows the rejection from potential employers, the financial insecurity, the loss of self-esteem.

"It feels really rotten," he says. "The one credo of capitalism is 'work will set you free' and without work there is no freedom."

"I'm not lazy. I refuse to be told I'm out of work because I'm lazy. Experience is virtually impossible to come by and job training is almost as hard to get."

No one can say how many people will not be able to continue their education because they failed to find work this summer. But many charge that Statistic Canada unemployment figures are too low.

Even if he could get job training, Weniger doubts it would improve his situation. Training does not create jobs, he says.

The 20-year-old, who moved to Ottawa to live with his parents after "starving" on welfare in Vancouver, plans to continue searching for a job. But he is no longer hopeful and will not return to school this fall.

Weniger is not alone in his plight.

"There have been students who've come in here and said they'd like to go back to school but can't afford to," says Peter Cavers of the Ottawa Unemployment Action Centre.

Wild Ones Back Again

By Bob Romas

Fresh from a recent date at Nag's Head North, the Wild Ones returned to Scarborough College last Tuesday night for yet another command performance in the pub. The band has become a perennial favorite at Scarborough since they won a pub talent contest last year. This is their fifth time here and judging from the crowd's response, hopefully not their last.

The group consists of four members: Andy Bell on rhythm guitar, John McKinstery on bass guitar, Don Busbridge on lead guitar (all three do vocals as well) and Glenn Kimberly on drums.

It was evident that the "Wild Ones" were in for some heavy rockin', as a couple of fuses blew out in their equipment even before they started playing. The band made up for this minor delay by exploding into a racous version of the Beatle's "I Saw Her Standing There" and the Kink's "Till The End of The Day."

All of the cover tunes were done quite well, especially the Stone's "Brown Sugar" (with some good guitar work by Don Busbridge.) Teenage Head's "Let's shake" got everybody bopping away. The "Wild Ones" also produced some good original material such as "Hey Hey Woman" and "I'm gonna get that girl."

The current direction of the group is to hopefully cut a professionally done demo tape. Drummer Glen Kimberly said, "I'm not worried, if anything happens, it happens. It's tough out there but as long as we're enjoying ourselves, having a good time, making a bit of money and playing good old rock and roll, none of UB40 or Haircut 100 stuff, it's all right..."

Obviously all those in attendance on Tuesday night responded to Glenn's philosophy, as they rocked and bopped the night away. A good time was had by all and hopefully we'll see more of the "Wild Ones" in the future.

"Me and my friends, we had a dream once, life was going to be a great adventure, and we were going to be the heroes."

The dream is alive in the...
